Tickets are still on sell at Ticketmaster..

The weigh-ins, set for Friday, Sept. 18, begin at 4 p.m and are free and open to the public. Doors open at 3 p.m. The weigh-ins take place on the east side of the Dallas Convention Center Arena (known as the A-section), which is located at 650 S. Griffin St. Additionally, an official autograph session takes place at the venue from 1 to 3 p.m. CT with UFC fighters Antonio Rodrigo Nogueira, Diego Sanchez, Jake Rosholt, Jon Fitch and Mike Swick. The signing event is also free and open to the public.

Former UFC Light Heavyweight Champion Tito Ortiz will be at Silver City Cabaret for a meet and greet from 5-7pm. Be sure to tip some ladies and enjoy $3.25 Beers & Wells while there. Silver City Cabaret is located at 7501 N. Stemmons Frwy, Dallas.

Of course if you can't make it to the live event, both Spearmint Rhino and Silver City will be showing it and offering some nice deals to entice you in. Check Industry News section on page 7 for info.

I have a serious problem with clubs and booking agents whose policy is to pay bands by how many people show up to see them and have to say who they are there to see on any given night.

While I understand the concept of who puts asses in the seats, as a musician (non-working at the moment), I still see it as an insult to not only the craft but also to humans who spend time, energy and money as well as blood, sweat and tears for a chance to get on stage before strangers in an attempt to entertain, move, educate or just rock some asses.

The policy of the door person asking, "What band are you here to see?" is not only grammatically incorrect (it should be "Which band are you here to hear?"), it's intrinsically wrong.

In my book, if bands show up, start and finish their sets on time, play in tune, in time and with some sense of originality and don't trash the place, the door money should be split evenly between the bands on the bill that night because they did their jobs. Of course, I am talking about the non-headliner status of most of the bands subjected to this manner of pay. If you can command the big bucks, by all means get it, take it and congrats. But this "Who are you here to see?" idea is a practice that is at the beginner level of entertainment and is wrong because it ends up killing the enthusiasm of creativity and projects an aura of false elitism which ends up 86ing any sort of cohesive music community.

Musicians have expenses outside of food, rent, gas... they also pay for gear, strings, sticks, clothes, and oftentimes are expected to be in a bar for hours even when they aren't on stage and buy their own drinks. They drive to the gig, load their gear in, wait around until it's their time to play, perform, and then wait until after 2 am to get their cut. Many of them have to get up and go to day jobs a couple of hours after they load out, drive home, and calm down enough to actually sleep.

In other words, they take time out of their lives to entertain you and your patrons, and thus deserve to get more than hash marks on a sheet of paper at the door that are supposed to equate to their talent but end up not equaling to their gas and bar tab. Maybe their fans are tired from their workday or just lazy assholes or their mom/wife/girlfriend won't let them out of the house or maybe they hate going out to drink and risk getting a DUI, preferring to drink for less and avoid jail by staying home that night. Bands who are good are going to end up bringing bodies in and when they are unestablished acts, it is up to the booking agent to have to sense to know which band knows how to entertain and help them build their following instead of beating them down with a system of judgment that is a death knell to art.

Another thing I have noticed at clubs where this policy is enforced that really hacks me off is that a lot of people who come to shows to "support their band" don't even open their ears and minds to give the other acts a chance. There is nothing more frustrating to a band who know they are good than an empty room even though the patio outside is full of people waiting for their buddies' band to go on. I attribute some blame to the brilliant minds on our city council who made certain the smoking ban passed, but look-- bands change out between sets and you've got a good ten minutes at least to choke down some nicotine. You might be surprised and truly turned on to some music that you like a lot if you pay attention, so show some open-mindedness and artistic appreciation for that which you are not familiar with. It's called growth. And if the bands you don't know suck, you have every right to tell them so. It's called voicing your opinion, which are like assholes... everybody has one.

If anything, the bartenders ought to be the gauge of which band brings which clientele into an establishment because liquor sales are where the real money is made. Band A might bring 20 people who don't drink, while Band B brings five of the most hardcore, steer-em-to-AA now brand name drinkers with high credit limits who know how to party all night long... who made who the most dough? I can hear the conversation now:

Patron: "Hi. Top shelf margarita, three shots of Jameson, two Buds and a Shiner."

Bartender: "Which band are you drinking for?"

Patron: "What, there's bands tonight?"

I have come up with new answers for those times when I am asked that dreaded question of who I am there to see when I pay my money to get into a show, and I encourage you to do the same:

"I am here to see all of them."

or

"I am here to see none of them."

or

"I am here to drink (or get away from my wife/husband/girlfriend/boyfriend/dog/kids... be creative!)... who gives a fuck? Take my money already!"

or the great standby

"The Sex Pistols."

Do you get paid by how many people call your boss and remark about how wonderful you are? Most likely not. You get paid for showing up and doing what you were hired to do, regardless of how many people do/don't appreciate you for it. This cliquish, high school "who's your fave?" mentality not only hurts musicians as a whole, but also instills a subconscious non-appreciation for something new that you might really like.

So next time you are asked, "What band are you here to see?" tell the door person nicely that you think the policy is crap and you are just there to rock. If enough of us do this consistently, maybe Dallas can have a prolific and profitable music scene once again, and not only for the bars but the musicians as well. SUPPORT LOCAL MUSIC! -YRS4

AIN'T NOTHIN' BUT A C-STRING!

I am writing to you this weekend from The Big Easy! That's right, I am in New Orleans, for the fabulous 1st annual New Orleans Burlesque Festival (www.neworleans-burlesquefest.com) and man, what a weekend it has been! I went with my friend Cayla of Decadent Dame Designs, a vintage accessories designer from Dallas. This festival is dedicated to Burlesque the way it was years ago in clubs all over famous streets such as Bourbon St. The producer, Rick DeLaup, assembled casts of the best dancers from all over, and had 4 showcases, including a highly touted Queen of Burlesque Fest showcase, featuring such names as Ophelia Flame (from Minneapolis), La Cholita (from LA), Rene'a LaRoux (who will also be at the Lakewood on Oct. 23rd) and Catherine D'Lish (who also broke the Guinness Book of World Records later that evening by dancing with the worlds' biggest ostrich fans, over 80 inches tall, at the House of Blues). Perle Noire (The Black Pearl) from New Orleans won the title, and was very deserved - her energy is unmatched! Look up her videos from past Miss Exotic World competitions, you'll be astounded! I actually got to step in and help wrangle panties at the House of Blues show, and it was quite fun! Over 25 acts from all over the United States (including our roomie from LA, Red Snapper, and she was GREAT as was Rosie the Riveter!) and they ranged from vaudeville to sultry. There are many festivals popping up all over, including Boston, New York, Texas and Dallas, and of course, the main one in Vegas (www.burlesquehalloffame.com) so check one out near you!

Also, this coming up weekend will be the Nouvelle Burlesque show, at the Lakewood Theatre in Dallas. Another Divina production, this show will showcase talent from all over DFW, and one or two will be selected to perform at the big show on October 23rd, which will feature Kalani Kokonuts, Miss Exotic World 2009, and Rene'a LaRoux, the Southern Belle from Hell. I will also be performing, so come on out and support your favorite burlesque performer and help her to win a spot! I hope to see you Saturday, come say hi!

Cheers!

METRO ANE SPORTS

This past Sunday was a holy day for me.

Yes, we'd already had an NFL game played. Yes, we were in the second set of college games.

But at mid-morning I was standing on my patio staring with glazed eyes at my grill, my mind filled with glorious football weekends of yesterday. And thinking of what was coming.

Game day. On patio's. On tailgates. In stadiums. The tv room.

Its mid week and all the sights, sounds, smells and tastes are still swirling around me.

For the sports fan, it don't get any better'n this. You get to live in the past, present, and future all at once.

We are now livin' the NFL, NCAAF, this batch of Rangers have refused to go quietly, the Stars are fixin' to start training camp, and the NBA is waiting in the wings.

When it's time for them to come collect my body, they'll have to pry the remote from my left hand, and blow torch the grill spatula from my right. Let's get it on.

How many times you heard about parity in the NFL? Like, so many times now you're the neighborhood go to guy on questions, right? And what are the TWO major levelers? You got it, bad teams draft higher and winning teams are given tougher schedules for the following

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

How's about half that is correct and the other half has some stink on it.

Obviously the draft is correct. How 'bout the "tougher schedule" is a somewhat ambiguous concept. Huh? It ain't exactly what they're talkin' about.

My buddy, Andy, tells me that not only do the teams play every team in their own division, they're assigned two whole other divisions to play through, one in their own conference and one in the opposing conference.

Here's a current example: the NFC East plays each team in their own division twice, the entire NFC South division once, and the entire AFC West division once. That's 14 games plus two randoms.

This is contrary to what you're kinda sorta led to believe, which is you play every team in your division twice, then the remaining ten games are assigned according to how you did the last season.

The reality is you have "divisional" pairings.

So if you're wanting to know how the Steelers, winners of last year's Super Bowl, ended up with a weaker schedule instead of the toughest, here's basically what happened.

Pittsburgh is in the AFC North, which, except for the Steelers was an overall weak division. Based on that, their division was given the AFC West and the NFC North divisions to compete with.

But did that actually work out well with strength pairings? Not exactly.

The AFC N (with the Steelers) gets the AFC W and the NFC N. The Chargers are in the AFC West, so they profit by getting the AFC N, but who did they get in the NFC? The AFC W got the NFC East.

So if your gonna complain about tougher and weaker schedules for parity, which I think you should if the NFL is gonna sell that, then Pittsburgh should've been given the NFC East and the Chargers the NFC North.

For 2008 the AFC N finished: Steelers (12-4), Ravens (11-5), Bengals (4-11-1), and Browns (4-11). The AFC W finished: Chargers (8-8), Broncos (8-8), Raiders (5-11), and Chiefs (2-14).

The AFC North and West WERE the two losingest divisions, true, and close, but the West lost more games than the North so should've been given the weaker of the NFC divisions.

Do fans have room to complain? Yeah, if the NFL's definition of "fair" is going to be strength to strength for BOTH in conference and out of conference matchups.

I mean, the NFC East was given the AFC West to romp through, and the NFC South to battle. Strength pairings wise, we probably shudda been given the AFC East, if the NFL was TRULY gonna do strength matchups for parity.

The AFC South and East were tied for most games won last year, then the N, then W. The NFC South won the most, then the East, then N, then W.

Did they get any of it right? Yes, conference wise they matched to records. The AFC E with S, and N with W, and NFC S with E, and N with W.

Where did the strength pairings not match? Between the Conferences.

Bottom line: stronger divisions got weaker opponents to play in the opposing conference, and that's not strength of schedule. And that's how the Pittsburgh Steelers, winners of last year's Super Bowl, got an easier, not tougher, schedule.

Let's get some bite with our bark.

Last week's games. Titans and Steelers was one hell'uva game. Best doggone opening game in years. In a game between heavies, Pittsburgh couldn't run the ball and Tennessee needed depth at receiver. Stop the Steelers run and keep pressure on Ben.

Ah, the Cowboys. The first half the D couldn't tackle and the only open receiver was the tight end, Witten. As Jimmy Johnson used to say, when going into a hostile arena, your main concern is simply surviving the first quarter, and considering the Buc's all out assault, that was the job. I didn't see any problems that can't be fixed, which is what you do in the first part of the season.

I really wanted the Bears to do better, but all things considered, not bad and they have some things to fix. The pulling linemen on sweeps were too far back and got in the way of the running backs. Cutler will settle down, especially when his receivers get it. Loss of Urlacher for season is a killer for that defense.

I enjoyed the heck out of the Niners v Cards game. And hey, here's the big "I TOLD YOU SO" of the week. Most called it an upset the 49er's won, not me, I just called it. San Fran's biggest problem is going to be that over commitment to the run. That was stupid at the end of the game. Let's hope they adjust.

I was wondering, who really wanted to win the Broncos v Bengals game? Actually the Zimmerman, who used to be Dallas's D coordinator and is now that for Cincy, he's bringing them along, its Cincy's offense that's cratered even more from last season. Denver's got BIG problems to overcome.

The Jets did better against the Texans than I thought they would, and Houston has to be wondering if it's time to fire the Head Coach, Kubiak, and find a new QB. Texans D didn't disappoint, but that offense sucks. The Jet's D shows Ryan's input, but don't let anybody fool you, just because New York won, Sanchez hasn't "arrived".

NFL Week Two:

Sunday, Sept 20 Noon Games

They were bottom dwellers last year, and they're bottom dwellers now: Raiders at Chiefs. KC did give the Ravens a heck'uva fight and they should prove too much for Oakland. Probable blowout of the day: Vikings at Lions, this is game two of Detroit ruining another young QB. Not much of a better game: Rams at Redskins. Washington's QB Campbell is still trying to prove he's a backup and not a starter. What might be fun defensively but no other reason, Bengals at Packers.

Possibility of a game: Arizona at Jacksonville. Cards have to find offense, they lost it somewhere's.

Two good division matchups: Panthers at Falcons and Texans at Titans. Both of these should be fun to watch if you can get'em.

A game that was marked on calendars until McNabb got hurt, Saints at Eagles. Still, this should be great seeing if Brees can tear apart that defense. Any time the Eagles have a chance to lose, that's a game a Dallas fan wants to open a brewski and watch.

Patriots at Jets. This game is gonna be a goodie. I mean a rip snortin' goodie. It's gonna have vicious hits, trick plays, knockin' helmets off, and bitin' people in the pile ups, and that's all during pregame. This is the funnest game of the day, bar none.

3:00 Games:

The afternoon stinker: Browns at Broncos. Denver has a receiver but no QB, and Cleveland has a QB but no receiver.

This'un will be fun to watch: Buc's at Bills. TO in a game long hurry up offense where he can't mess up the huddle ought to a blast. Why? Watching to see what he'll do to interrupt the calls from on the line.

This shudda had been a good game until Chicago's main defensive player was lost for the season: Steelers at Bears. Now it's a murky business in the windy city.

Dos barn burners: Seahawks at Niners and Ravens at Chargers. Singletary has that Niner's defense on a power surge, it'll be interesting to see what the birdies can do against it. People think Rivers and friends can charge up the standings, now they get to test it against a top ranked defense. The glue for the Ravens defense this year is Ray Lewis because the D coordinator is now the Jets head coach. This is better for Baltimore than the Eagles losing their D coach.

7:30 Game:

Giants at Cowboys. Forget the new stadium, forget the home opener, this one's all about the game, and it's gonna be a good one. Both Dallas and New York revamped their receiver corps over the off season and this will be a great test for them. The big test will be Dallas's O line for both run and pass blocking. If Garrett turns it loose the offense should be fine, I think the question is now whether Phillips can get his defense to perform. No sacks against Tampa won't cut it against the Giants.

Monday, Sept 24

Colts at Dolphins. You just think about how good this game's gonna be all day Monday and you won't have the Monday workday blues. The Colts no huddle offense versus the Dolphins wildcat. Two tough defenses. This gonna be a good'un. Get your friends, food, drinks, and voice boxes ready.

Last year's college quarterback class was loaded with talent, so why didn't they all come out? Last year's success of Ryan and Flacco, all these guys are starting.

Daryl

Plano

Daryl:

There is no question that of the three that stayed in, McCoy, Bradford, and Tebow, they were all better than those that came out. Since Detroit had the number one pick in the draft, it could be as simple that neither of the big three wanted to play for the Lions and have their career's ruined. Even if Detroit has the number one pick next year, they'll not take a QB number one, so strategically staying back one more year in college wasn't a bad decision. I doubt seriously if all would've been starting.

Michael Jordan was bigger than the NBA. He carried it on his shoulders! He revived it from its death. Induct him apart from the others? You need to quit eating idiot flakes for breakfast. The only reason he shudda been inducted apart from the others was to not embarrass the league and other players.

What's your opinion of how all the new NFL head coaches are doing? Will any be fired after one season? Who will be the best?

Smack

Eulless

Smack:

Why call yourself Smack, why not Kerplunk, 'cause you dropped the ball with that question. Technically Niner's coach Singletary is new, but he was interim for the last half of last season so that's different than the others. He's had more time to have an effect on the team. Steve Spagnuolo with the Rams probably has the more difficult job but if the ownership backs him, has the brains and guts to pull it off. Raheem Morris of the Buc's, well, he's probably the one the coin toss is on the most. I don't know if any will be fired after the season.

TD

Two Dogs:

Did Kim Clijsters beat Serena Williams or did the line judge cost SW the game? How can she be fined for yelling at the line judge? McEnroe did far worse but they didn't prohibit him from playing any Grand Slams. The judges took the game away from her.

Marlene

Dallas

Marlene:

Well, darlin', sorry to tell you this but I don't do tennis, and I don't care who won. But, just for you, I did a wee tad of research. Miracles haven't been banned so there were some odds of Serena winning, but they were like the odds needed to win the LOTTO. Her outburst included personal threats, whereas McEnroe was a juvenile but never threatened a judge. It was a good line call, close, but accurate. There's more than a truck load who don't believe her latest apology was sincere. The judges took nothing away from her, her own behavior cost her that.

"Check The Video"

Richard Hunter hosts "The Richard Hunter Show" 4-6pm weekdays on 1360 AM Dallas.

Over the years that I have been doing a talk radio show, few things have given me more colorful stories to tell than my long time friendship with Girls Gone Wild creator Joe Francis. I first had him on my show by phone back in 2002, and when he came to Dallas for a shoot shortly thereafter, we met and hit it off right away. I have made a few true friendships through the show over the years, and Joe is definitely at the top of that list. I have been his friend during a lot of good times, and in the recent past for some bad times that led me to circumstances that I never envisioned myself experiencing. For example, thanks to Joe, I learned the procedure for mailing books to an inmate. Turns out, the book store has to do it themselves after you purchase them, so as to assure that you don't smuggle in a file or chisel Shawshank Redemption style. We made it through all that, and this time last year I was broadcasting live from his backyard for what director Jason Reitman still describes as "one of the most bizarre experiences of my life". It was nearly five years ago now that Francis was a groomsman in my Moonlite Bunny Ranch wedding, and I still recall him running around at the reception with the marriage license in his hand screaming, "It's not signed yet! It's not too late!" Even with that, my wife loves him, and she is a much better judge of character than I am.

Knowing Joe, it was not without a certain element of predictability that I saw my friend's name in the tabloid headlines this past Friday morning. What was completely unexpected was the headline: "Joe Francis: I Did Not Punch Brody's Girlfriend". "Brody" is Brody Jenner, son of former Olympian and current "Keeping Up With The Kardashians" star Bruce Jenner, from his relationship with Elvis Presley ex Linda Thompson. Brody's girlfriend is someone known by the two first names "Jayde Nicole". Immediately, this looked completely unbelievable to me. I have seen Joe in action, and by action I mean a hedonistic binge of sexuality, often times documented on video and available for a low price at girlsgonewild.com. I have been in bars with Joe, at parties, and I even watched him waste no time getting acquainted with one of the bride's maids at my wedding. What I have never seen him do is be involved in anything that was non-consensual, and I had certainly never seen him do anything violent.

The graphic account that Ms. Nicole was detailing to TMZ sounded like a full on blind rage beat down. According to her, she and Brody saw Joe making advances towards an ex girlfriend at an LA bar called "Guys And Dolls", and when she approached him to intervene, he unloaded on her, throwing her to the ground while kicking and punching her. That is definitely not the guy that I know. I immediately texted Joe to find out what had happened. Joe had a completely different story. He said that while he was talking to his friend, he was hit from behind with a drink, glass and all. He whipped around to see what had happened, and as he grabbed the hair of his attacker, Brody Jenner sucker punched him to the floor. The club's general manager helped him outside, where he was once again attacked by Jenner, his shirt ripped off in the process. Jenner was tazed by club security while they tried to subdue him until police could arrive.

Just as I heard back from Joe and received this drastically different version of the events the other shoe dropped, and like much of his life, thankfully this too was caught on tape. Club owner Michael Sutton reviewed the security camera footage, and according to TMZ who had originally reported the story, the video backed Joe's account. Further adding to the curiousness of the accusations, Joe told me on my show Monday that the Kardashian family is backing him in the matter. Francis has had a long-standing close relationship with the Kardashian/Jenner clan (with the exception of Brody) that I have witnessed first hand. When Joe was being held for almost a year without trial, it was Bruce Jenner who contributed a testimonial to Joe's character on his website that was featured on the same page as mine. Brody's stepmother Kris had recently appeared on my show with Joe, and we talked about her bringing the "Kardashian" camera crew to my next LA broadcast. Anyway, I also knew that this wasn't the first time that Brody had been involved in a high profile physical altercation, and during Monday's appearance on my show Joe mentioned a recently publicized fight that Brody had had with his own stepbrother Robert Kardashian Jr.

Joe said Monday that he was considering pressing charges against Jenner (and presumably Jayde as well), but as we spoke I was reminded of that old newspaper truth: Accusation: front page above the fold. Retraction: bottom of the obits. There are plenty of people who read that initial accusation and then either don't bother to follow up on the investigation or simply aren't exposed to it for lack of subsequent coverage. Hopefully those who covered the story Friday will follow up on it as well.

On a lighter note, I accused Joe of concocting this elaborate ruse as a ploy to get himself photographed shirtless on Perez Hilton's site. "Not to sound gay", I texted him, "but you looked ripped!" "That is kinda gay", Joe texted back, "but you got married in a whore house, so gay is out of the question".

Remote Buddy Helps You Find Lost Remotes

I haven't ever heard of a single person who hasn't lost their remote at least a few times. I'm sure there are some out there, but they are few and far between. Myself, I have a couch that will try to eat anything you place on it, remotes included. I usually know to check inside of the couch to find the remote again, so that is one advantage. If you're in a household with a big family though, losing track of a remote would be pretty easy. Which is where this Remote Buddy would be helpful, it makes it possible to page your remotes, so you can find them again.

It has a spot for four different remotes to sit in the device and then a cup holder that can be clipped to either side of the Remote Buddy. It comes with a total of four color coded receivers that attach to the back of each remote control. Not only will it give a designated spot to lay your remotes, when it's not placed there you can push a button to make the receiver on the remote chime so that you can find it. This isn't exactly a gadget for those that are down to one remote, but it would help out those that have a whole mess of remotes. You can purchase it for $39.98 from First Street.

Kymera Magic Wand Functions As Universal Remote

Universal remotes are a dime a dozen and usually are overpriced. They are also notorious for being excessively boring. That is except for the massive ones meant to be a joke about someone's age or being blind. Instead of going with your usual gray remote control with too many buttons, you could go a slightly more magical route. Instead of pushing buttons you could wave around your magic wand to make the channels change.

The Kymera Magic Wand can be flicked up or down in order to change the channel. If you need the volume up or down you turn it in a clockwise motion. It has a total of 13 "magical functions" in order to perform actions on your TV. The wand is battery powered and they're kind enough to actually include the batteries for once. As of now this isn't out, but don't worry, it is coming soon. You can currently pre-order this. In order to do that you'll have to pay a deposit of £10 or about $17. All together the wand will cost you £49.95 or about $83.

We're big fans of clever space utilization; consequently, it's surprising that we haven't come across something like this before. The EZ Mount Cell Phone Charging Station replaces your standard two-outlet wall plate with a wider panel that has a built-in key hook (also doubles as an excess cable reel) and a non-skid, angled shelf for your iPhone, cell, or other powered gadget. The shelf can also swap positions for left or right side for installation. Cost: $13

Tip: Use it in the kitchen with outlets installed at a more convenient height.

Here's a desk accessory that probably won't make you look like a peaceful person. Instead you can show your love of big guns and fighting back. You don't want any of those fluffy sweet desk accessories. You need something that reminds people of warfare and death. With this you'll get exactly that. These military guys will hold your pens or you can get a different version that will hold a roll of tape for you. You can purchase them from Brando, where the prices range from $18 on down to $16.

Allergies Dampen Sex Lives

Having allergies can take a toll on your sex life, new research shows. When polled, 83 percent of people with allergic rhinitis said it affected their sexual activity at least sometimes, with almost 18 percent of those affected saying their allergies nearly always got in the way of a satisfying sex life.

Commercials for allergy relief products tend to focus on helping people get back to enjoying an active lifestyle, such as taking their kids to the park, Benninger said. Rarely is there mention of sex lives, and that could be because it's an area that has been studied so little, he noted.

Benninger's team also found that allergic rhinitis was linked with sleep problems, which other studies have found as well. The study was published recently in Allergy and Asthma Proceedings.

The researchers polled about 700 people, roughly half with allergic rhinitis, asking questions about sexual function, sleep and fatigue. The participants averaged in their late 30s to mid-40s, and those with allergic rhinitis were not being treated for their allergies.

Though about 17 percent of those with allergic rhinitis said they always or almost always noticed an adverse impact on their sex life, just 5 percent of those who did not have the condition said their sex life wasn't good.

Exactly why the allergies affect sexual functioning isn't certain, but Benninger suspects that the runny nose, itchy eyes and other symptoms can make a person feel less than sexy.

The study definitely sheds light on a new area, said Dr. Clifford Bassett, a clinical assistant professor of medicine at the Long Island College Hospital/State University of New York and a clinical instructor at New York University School of Medicine. "Sexual function is not something typically evaluated [with allergies]," he said.

But the condition can be treated, both Bassett and Benninger stressed. From over-the-counter nasal sprays to prescription or over-the-counter antihistamines and prescription intranasal steroids, options abound.

The message to allergy sufferers, Benninger said, is not to confine lovemaking to times when their symptoms aren't so bad but to seek treatment that can help them feel better much of the time. Paying attention to allergy triggers and, for instance, closing bedroom windows so pollen levels are at a minimum can help, too.

Bassett also said he hopes the study will wake up those with allergy symptoms whose sex life is less than ideal. "I think it's essential for patients to realize that help is out there," he said. "They don't need to be a casualty in the lovemaking department."

California Legislator Gives Graphic Account Of His Multiple Affairs Into Open Mic

Back in July, Michael Duvall, a second-term California assemblyman who "is the vice-chairman of the legislature's commerce committee and a member of its ethics committee, are married with two children and are known as a staunch defender of conservative family values" was to appear on a televised committee meeting. Not realizing his mic was already live, he began to brag about his sexual conquests.

Make sure your microphone is OFF before bragging about and giving disgustingly lewd details of your affair with a much younger woman who is also a lobbyist whose clients have business before your committee, and also laughing about the fact that you are simultaneously cheating on your wife and your mistress with yet another woman...

Not content with mentioning the fact he was having an affair, which would have caused problems enough, Duvall -- who I am now officially christening "Open Mike" -- launched into explicit details, many of which are too nasty to reprint here, and all of which were captured by his microphone. (Among them: tiny underwear, spankings, and the 19-year-age difference....

It gets better:

"She wears little eye-patch underwear," said Duvall, who is married with two children. "So, the other day she came here with her underwear, Thursday. And so, we had made love Wednesday--a lot! And so she'll, she's all, 'I am going up and down the stairs, and you're dripping out of me!' So messy!"...

During his political career, Duvall has unabashedly espoused conservative principles and is known as a partisan Republican with a knack for theatrics: He has noisily driven his Harley-Davidson motorcycle to functions. In 2008, Duvall blasted efforts to condone gay marriage. Legislatively, he has proposed bills to aid the insurance industry and government contractors feeding off the state's massive transportation kitty.

He has offered a law to alter the First Amendment rights of Americans by banning anti-war activists from putting the names of fallen soldiers on T-shirts with messages such as "Bush lied" on the front and "They died" on the back; he observed that the dead soldiers fought to protect freedom, and "opportunists" should not be allowed to "exploit" the sacrifices with political messages opposing war.

Such thinking impressed certain constituencies. Earlier this year, the man who never graduated from high school received "100 percent" approval scores by the California Republican Assembly, the state's leading conservative outfit, and the Capitol Resource Institute (CRI), a fierce guardian of traditional family values.

And best of all? He's refusing to resign (though he's taken to actually running away from reporters).

Porn To Be Downloadable From PlayStation Network?

Ready your PS3 controller, as porn might become available on your console before you know it. Porn will soon become available on the PlayStation Network if the world's largest adult entertainment company gets approval from Sony, claims Vivid CEO Steve Hirsch.

Speaking to gaming site Kotaku, Hirsch said "Our point is pretty simple: as long as age verification is in place that (Sony) feels comfortable with, we see no reason why adults shouldn't be allowed to access adult movies on the PlayStation 3." Currently no adult entertainment is downloadable from the PS3, something Sony has felt quite strongly about in the past.

Hirsch admitted to Kotaku that Sony "had made it clear in the past they were not interested", however now that Sony is allowing Japanese gamers to download on-demand porn movies in HD from the network "we are going to move forward and make a formal request".

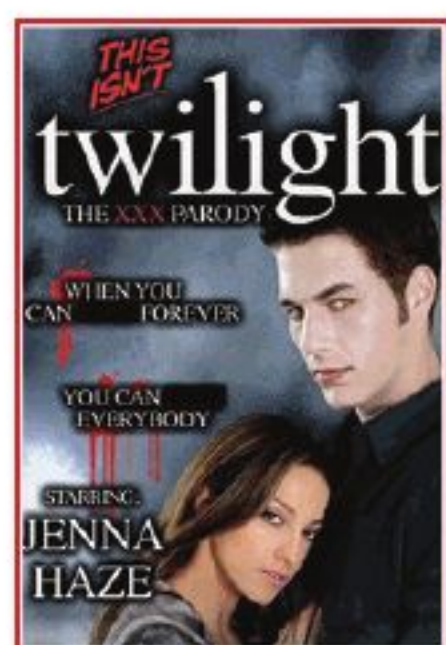

It's not just PlayStation that Hirsch has his eye on either, telling Kotaku "if we move forward here we would look at other potential gaming platforms like the Xbox 360". The Nintendo Wii is obviously not an option, due to the manufacturers' family-friendly image. If porn does become downloadable via the PlayStation Network, we see no reason why it can't be transferred to the PSP Go - just don't watch porn on the train to work, now.

Pair Accused Of Playing Porn DVD At Ark. Wal-Mart

Two Oklahoma men have been arrested for allegedly playing a pornographic DVD on display televisions at a Fort Smith Wal-Mart. Sebastian County jail records show 20-year-olds Cody Allen Sexton and Kenny Dean Andrews were arrested on a felony obscenity complaint.

Police said the two put the pornographic DVD into a player that was connected to six televisions on Sept. 3. The DVD was removed after a customer notified a store manager.

Gingrich Group Awards, Then Revokes Entrepreneurship Award for Porn Studio

On Wednesday, American Solutions for Winning the Future, a conservative 527 group founded by former House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.), notified a pornography studio executive that she'd won the group's 2009 Entrepreneur of the Year award.

Needless to say, Allison Vivas, president of Pink Visual, was shocked at the news.

"I'm honored, and more than a little surprised, to receive this prestigious award," Vivas said. "It never occurred to me that Newt Gingrich, one of the principal architects of the conservative 'Contract with America' in the 1990's, would be willing to brave criticism from the far right of his party in order to recognize good work done on the part of an adult entertainment professional."

Turns out it was an error. Media Matters just received a statement from an ASWF spokesman indicating that the message delivered to Vivas "was sent by mistake."

"We regret the error," spokesman Dan Kotman added.

Leave the Money, Grab the Doll

Times are tough all over. Never mind that taking a real woman out to dinner could run up a hefty tab. But even getting a love doll version of a woman can be too expensive to get through traditional means.

Maybe that's why one man, apparently desperate for a little fun and a certain type of woman, was not about to be denied the chance to have the girl of his dreams.

The as-yet-unidentified man drove his vehicle through the doors of an AdultMart store in Vermillion (about halfway between Columbus and Cleveland), got out without setting the brake, discarded a $300 love doll before settling on a $150 model and then drove out the rear of the building.

In all, the suspect did at least $20,000 in damage to the building and its contents.

Aside from taking the $150 love doll and doing massive damage, the alleged thief took nothing else, and hid his face from security cameras to try and avoid detection, authorities said.

It's unclear why the man spurned one sex doll over another, but perhaps police can find out once they enhance security videos in an attempt to better see the vehicle's license plate.

Bree Exposed Adam & Eve

Bree Olson fans, I got another video for your collection and it's so hot it will leave burn marks where ever you lay it down. AVN best starlet winner return with two new scenes plus you gets some fresh new faces (Missy Stonem Jenny Hendrix and Charlie Laine), plus a wickedly sexy girl/girl scene with my favorite Ava Rose.

Bree's best scene on here is the one with Tommy Gunn who makes Bree take it in the ass. You don't see Bree doing much anal, so it was a special treat.

I was happy to see Ava Rose on here. I love her

Betty Paige look, especially now that she's curvy. While her scene with Charlie Laine got me hot under the killer, I prefer to see her with a guy.

Both Missy Stone and Jenny Hendrix made feel really dirty in a good way and I hope to see them in future releases.

Besides the five scene on here, you also get a bonus scene from Bree's Camp Out, behind the scenes feature, photo gallery, interviews, bloopers, previews and a digital download copy. I give this release 4 out 5. -Gil Tha Thrill

IT'S HARD TO FIND A GOOD DONKEY SHOW

The Weekly Adventures Of OJ Tobias

Moods are amazing. You can start your day pissed off and then, after you pistol whip some jackass at the gas station for cutting you off at the pump, you start to feel a little better. I know you know the feeling.

As much as it makes me feel better, I can not help but think about the children. Sure, they cry "Stop hitting my Grandma!" but fk those little shits! I got places to be. She's old anyway. She's got nowhere to be. I gotta get my fix before work! Not to mention my bookie is hounding me. He can get a whippin' too, if he don't chill!!! I hope you are reading this, too, Mr. Booky-Book!

Now for the instructional part of my "How to Live Your Life" column.

When you empty the contents of a fire extinguisher into the elevator of the penthouse suite and then send that elevator to the lobby, the Police and Fire Departments will both come knocking on the penthouse door.

However, their first question will not be about the elevator. The first question will always be "Where the hell did you get all this popcorn?" They of course will be referring to the fact that the entire living area of the penthouse suite is covered knee-deep in popcorn.

The best reply to this question is, "I am sorry, Officer. I don't have your shoe horn" and attempt to slam the door.

Unfortunately, the popcorn will not help you elude the Police. No matter how drunk you are.

It is always a good idea to hook your pants to the nearest coat rack. The Police will not go through the popcorn to get your pants. They just take you bare-assed.

Just thought I would give you a tip.

Come see me perform Sept. 30 at the Addison Improv Comedy Club located at 4980 Beltline Rd. Suite 250, Addison, TX.

What Bored Retired People Do

Working people frequently ask retired people what they do to make their days interesting?

Well, for example, the other day my wife and I went into town and went into a shop. We were only in there for about 5 minutes. When we came out, there was a cop writing out a parking ticket. We went up to him and said, "Come on man, how about giving a senior citizen a break?" He ignored us and continued writing the ticket. I called him a Nazi turd. He glared at me and started writing another ticket for having worn tires. So my wife called him a fascist-pig. He finished the second ticket and put it on the windshield with the first. Then he started writing a third ticket. This went on for about 20 minutes. The more we abused him, the more tickets he wrote. Personally, we didn't care. We came into town by bus. We try to have a little fun each day now that we're retired. It's important at our age.

Jewish Divorce

A New York judge is presiding over the divorce proceedings of a Jewish couple. When the final papers have been signed and the divorce is complete the woman thanks the judge and says,

"Now I have to arrange for a Ghet."

The judge inquires what she means by a Ghet.

So, the woman explains that a Ghet is a religious ceremony required under the Jewish religion in order to receive a divorce recognized by the Jewish faith.

The judge says, "You mean a religious ceremony like a Bris?" (Circumcision)

She replies, "Yes, very similar, only in this case you get rid of the entire prick!"

Ask Dr. Zamra "Metro's Sexy Scientist"

Dr. Zamra,
How does lube work? If some are water based, then why can't I just use water. And how in the hell is sand (Silicone) turned into a slippery substance?
Lubed up in Texas

* Lube works by imitating a woman's natural lubrication and reducing friction between body parts.
* Some lubricants need to be water based so they don't degrade the latex used for condoms.
Plus plain water doesn't do much to ease friction.
Have you ever tried to have sex in water?
Those scenes in movies where people are getting it on in a pool or the shower are so unrealistic.

Water washes away whatever natural lubricant is present.

And it also rinses off water based lube easily, while silicone based lube takes more work to wash off.

* Silicone based sand is also used to make glass, and of course Silicone is most famous as ingredient A in fake boobies!

I know that sand is melted down then spread and cooled to form glass.

But I don't know the complete and complex process of getting silicone to stay in a jellied form appropriate for lube, or all the other ingredients in different types of lube.

Companies don't exactly post that info on their websites :P

I'm sure you're all tired of thinking of lube in such an intellectual way, so get your minds back in the lube lined gutter...

Did I Ever Tell You The One About... And other strange oddities of the world

Repentant Man Breeds 4,600 Scorpions

A Thai man is keeping more than 4,600 scorpions as pets to atone for the years he spent cooking the arachnids to sell as snacks.

Scorpions, insects and worms are commonly eaten in Thailand, especially in the northern regions.

But after years of serving up scorpions, Suang Puangsri, a practicing Buddhist, felt it was time to befriend them instead.

"Although I was happy to have money, I felt suffering deep inside as they were being harmed by me," he told Reuters. "I felt scared that I was committing a sin."

The 38-year-old has given up the bottom floor of his two-storey home to the scorpions, who scuttle about a 6 meter by 5 meter (19 ft by 16 ft) enclosure decorated with branches and stone so that very little light and heat come in.

Suang buys up to one kg of live cicadas and other insects daily to feed his pets, who have stung him so many times that he says he is immune to their venom.

He also spends at least an hour every day meditating inside the enclosure, often placing scorpions in his mouth.

But less than an hour later, Martinez spotted one of the men leaning against a banister overlooking the parking lot.

"He asked if I had a boyfriend," Diana Martinez told 10TV News. Then he asked her out.

"We are not exactly sure what he was thinking at the time," said Columbus police Sgt. Sean Laird.

Man Cited For Cursing In Public Under 1887 Law

A man was cited for cursing in public under a local law created back in 1887. Police said a 19-year-old man was cited Wednesday after he yelled obscenities at officers who had earlier given him a ticket for underage drinking. Officers said they could hear the man cursing at them from a block away. Several neighbors said they also heard the shouting.

Ohio Official Says Castration Comment A Joke

A county commissioner said she was joking when she told a former county resident she wanted to castrate him and had the tools to do it. Jeff Davidson said Hancock County Commissioner Emily Walton, who is a veterinarian, made the comment to him during a heated telephone conversation last week over a neighborhood drainage issue. Davidson said the comment was unprofessional and that Walton should resign as commissioner.

Cat In Ohio Survives 26 Days Under Fire Debris

A woman's pet cat has been found alive, buried beneath debris 26 days after an Ohio fire.

Sandy LaPierre says she assumed 1-year-old Smoka had died from the Aug. 10 fire in Franklin, about 30 miles north of Cincinnati. The blaze broke out in a building housing a flower shop and LaPierre's second-floor apartment.

A demolition company moved in to tear down what was left of the building the day after the fire. A crew from Stark Wrecking Co. came back Sept. 4 to clear away the rubble and found Smoka's head sticking out from under 16 feet of debris.

LaPierre says her female cat lost a lot of weight and has been gobbling down food to make up for it. She says Smoka has some difficulty walking but otherwise seems OK.

US Robber Returns To Ask Victim On A Date

A robber who went back to the scene of the crime to ask his victim out on a date was arrested after the woman chatted with him while her cousin called police.

Diana Martinez was parked in front of her Columbus, Ohio, apartment when three men pointed a gun at her head and stole her purse and her friend's wallet, local media report.

Martinez screamed and hit one of the men with her car door. They fled when a nearby neighbor threatened them.

Deputy, Trooper Stun Elk To Free It From Fence

Normally, if you're close enough to use a stun gun on a bull elk, you might be too close. But it worked out well for a Linn County sheriff's deputy and an Oregon State Police trooper faced with a dilemma. They responded Thursday to a call near Harrisburg about a big elk whose antlers had become entangled in a barbed wire fence, pinning its head in place.

They contacted the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife for advice and all parties agreed it would take too long for a wildlife agent to respond and tranquilize the animal.

So the two devised their own plan: the deputy used a Taser stun gun on the elk for about 25 seconds while the trooper cut it free. According to a sheriff's office statement, the animal then ran off without any sign of ill effects.

Officials: Man Demands To Drink Beer Before Arrest

Authorities in the Florida Panhandle say they arrested a convenience store shoplifter who demanded to drink the 12-ounce beer he had stolen before being taken into custody.

The Bay County Sheriff's office says the man told the deputy he had recently lost his job of 13 years and wanted to drink beer. The man became combative when the deputy wouldn't let him finish it.

He was charged Wednesday with shoplifting, battery, possession of marijuana not more than 20 grams and smuggling contraband into a detention facility.

AWOL Lesbian Soldier Seeks Asylum In Canada

U.S. Army Private Bethany Smith fled to Canada after her fellow soldiers discovered that she was a lesbian. Pte. Smith was seen by other soldiers holding hands with another woman at a mall near the base in Fort Campbell, KY. After that, according to Smith, she was treated as "less than human." She was allegedly physically assaulted on a regular basis in full view of superior officers and received death threats. Upon discovering that a gay soldier was beaten to death in his bed with a baseball bat at the same base in 1999, Smith came out to her sergeant and requested a discharge, which was denied. "He told me straight up, 'We'll figure out the paperwork when we get back from deployment,'" she said. Smith and her unit were on deck for deployment in Afghanistan. She alleges that the military's "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy was being willfully ignored because of a shortage of soldiers available for combat deployment.

Smith then drove to Canada where The War Resister Support Campaign assisted her in settling into a new life north of the border. However, Canadian officials are now weighing whether to grant her refugee status or to deport her. "If Bethany were to return, she actually would be putting her life in danger," said her attorney Jamie Liew. Upon return to the U.S., Smith would likely face charges of desertion and indecency, which could carry prison sentences. While most U.S. military deserters who have fled to Canada to avoid deployment have been deported, Liew says that the sexual orientation issue makes Smith's application for refugee status more compelling. "Bethany is coming with an extremely different story. She's coming because of the way her life was threatened because of her sexual orientation," said the attorney. Liew further alleges that the U.S. military judicial system is "not up to par" with the human rights standards maintained by Canada and other civilized nations.

San Francisco's Gay Radio Station Goes Dark

San Francisco's gay-oriented radio station has been sold after five years of broadcasting, the San Francisco Chronicle reported.

KNGY, Energy 92.7, owned by Flying Bear Media, was sold in August for a reported $6.5 million to Golden State Broadcasting, according to rbr.com, a website devoted to radio and television business news.

New owner GSB took control of the station on Thursday evening and dismissed the staff of about 35, the paper reported. The new station is called "the Rev FM," as in revolution. The purchase transformed KNGY from a high-energy dance station to KREV, a mainstream Top 40 broadcaster.

KNGY employed openly gay DJ's, supported GLBT causes, and relied heavily on advertisers looking to reach the gay community.

"The station lasted five years," Jason Dahlstedt, producer of KNGY's Fernando and Greg in the Morning show, told the paper. "When it launched, everybody said it wouldn't make it past a year."

Golden State Broadcasting is headed by Edward R. Stolz II, who also owns stations in Palm Springs and Las Vegas.

Straight Spouses Advocate Same-Sex Marriage

Think gay men and women who want to marry their partners, but can't, have it bad? What about the straight men and women we've roped into marrying us so we can be "normal" and play house?

There's a whole class of victims in the arena of gay marriage bans that haven't been getting their due: the straight spouses who unknowingly wed a gay. You see, because we're a country that discriminates against homos, same-sex loving Americans who want picket fences and 2.5 kids are practically forced into marrying someone of the opposite sex!

And wouldn't you know it, there's an entire support group for duped hetero spouses. New Jersey-based Straight Spouse Network has more than 50 chapters across the country to help straight husbands and wives cope with learning they married a homo. But rather than be spurned by our deception (and the knowledge we probably hated having sex with them), some of these breeder folks are turning into our allies — and attacking the same marriage discrimination laws we've been going after.

That's because they're "the unacknowledged victims of the victims of homophobia," according to SSN's Amity Pierce. (It's unclear whether Jim McGreevey's ex-wife has sought Pierce's counsel.) This group sees anti-gay marriage laws as the reason gays feel forced to marry straights; if only they could get joint tax returns and shared health benefits in a gay marriage, they wouldn't have to trick America's heterosexuals into fake marriages.

But don't get too overjoyed thinking the hetero members of "mixed-orientation" marriages suddenly want to be our BFFs: Plenty of them voted for Prop 8 just to spite you.

Being Gay Could Halt Elton's Adoption Bid

Sir Elton John's adoption bid might be refused because he is gay. The pop legend and his husband David Furnish are desperate to give a home to 14-month-old boy Lev - who they met at an orphanage at the weekend - but could be refused because it is illegal for homosexual couples to adopt in the Ukraine.

The 62-year-old musician and his 46-year-old husband will need to appeal to Ukrainian President Viktor Yushchenko for special dispensation to bring the toddler back to the UK to live with them.

To further complicate their bid, the couple are also deemed too old to look after the young boy because national laws state there must be no more than a 45-year age gap between a child and its adoptive parents.

If the adoption is allowed, John and Furnish, who married in a civil ceremony three years ago, would also be required to adopt Lev's brother under Ukrainian rules.

John met Lev while performing his song Circle of Life at the orphanage for babies with HIV and children who have parents with the disease in the town of Makeyevka.

Porsche Design's 135-Foot Catamaran Megayacht

Sure, cars like the Cayenne and even the Panamera are enormous in comparison to the 911. But there's still only so big Porsche can go. That is, on land at least. Not one to be told to stick to its core business, Porsche's design arm has teamed up with a Singapore shipyard to design a state-of-the-art catamaran megayacht.

Worlds apart from the speedboat which Porsche Design penned for Fearless, the RFF135 is a massive twin-hull design measuring 135 feet in length (hence the name) with a 41-foot beam. That's enough space to accommodate 10 guests and 10 crew members below decks in 472 square meters of area, with another 208 square meters of deck space up top.

That's almost unfathomably large, and to propel the vessel up 35 knots (about 40 mph), the catamaran will be equipped with twin V16 turbodiesel engines from German manufacturer MTU, each producing a massive 4,600 horsepower. Don't ask about miles per gallon – this puppy will drink down 750 liters of diesel every hour, but at least you're bound to look damned good doing it, right?

Welcome To Kentucky, Here's Your Six-Wheeled El Camaro

We couldn't believe our eyes when we first saw this six-wheeled, Road-Runner-spoilered, Ferrari-straked "El Camaro" in flat black primer hailing from Ashland, Kentucky. The bold scent of awesome and Schlitz practically wafts from the eBay listing.

2Evil: The Scooter from Hell

The French have created their share of mad machines, ranging from gently eccentric cars to the devilish little scooter – named 2Evil – you see here. All right, it's stretching the definition of what you'd call a 'scooter,' but MXS, the 2Evil's creators, insist it's a scooter and we'll just go with that.

Fitted with a custom-built Gilera-based two-stroke engine that consists of two 86cc cylinders, the MXS 2Evil spits out 50 horsepower, which is transferred to the rear wheel via a CVT. This 'scooter' does the standing eighth-mile (200 metres) in 6.5 seconds and hits a top speed of 149km/h. Impressive, for something that's only fitted with a tiny, 172cc engine.

2010 Suzuki GSF1250 Bandit

Suzuki have released first pics of the 2010 GSF1250 Bandit, which is fitted with a revised, liquid-cooled, DOHC, 16-valve, 1255cc inline-four. Styling changes include a new headlamp and taillamp, new exhaust and minor changes to the bodywork. The suspension is adjustable for preload and seat height can be lowered by 20mm, via adjustable shims. ABS is optional.

Sure, it isn't exactly the most high-tech motorcycle in the world but the naked GSF Bandit is probably just right for those who want a big, standard-style bike with comfortable ergonomics and daily-use reliability. The bike is priced at 8,249 euros (US$12,000) and will be available in Suzuki showrooms early next year.

Super-Sperm Are Causing Fertility Chaos

You may never get to be a superhero and smash your way through buildings like the Incredible Hulk, but there's at least a chance your sperm will. (OK, so that's not actually a good thing, but at least "super-sperm" sounds cool.)

Women's bodies are designed to make life difficult for sperm. According to Dr Hasson, of Tel Aviv University in Israel, "They eject, dilute, divert and kill spermatozoa so that only about a single spermatozoon gets into the vicinity of a viable egg at the right time." Apparently after generations of this, sperm got fed up and started hitting the gym.

According to an evolutionary biologist, some men are producing sperm that is so strong and so fast they barrel past the female's defenses in their effort to fertilize the egg, allowing multiple sperm to hit the target. If you recall your birds and your bees correctly, in order for fertilization to work, only one sperm can fertilize the egg. When several hit home it's called polyspermy (heh) and the egg ends up ruined.

This has, in turn, led to a rise in levels of infertility, at least according to Dr. Hasson's theory. The solution to the problem is apparently just to wait it out, as women's bodies evolve in kind, presumably by producing some manner of ovarian Kryptonite.

A Practical Guide to Drinking at Work

Spending eight hours in a jail cell-like cubicle five days per week is enough to crush even the mightiest of souls. The work you do is boring as all hell, the people you work with are obnoxious and your boss is a dunderheaded jackass. It's enough to make a person want to devote their life to homelessness and drug abuse. When the daily grind gets to be too much to take, don't act on those workplace shooting day dreams you've been having. Instead, just get hammered. Seriously, booze makes just about anything except clinical depression far more enjoyable. But be careful, if you get sloppy about it, you will get caught. Here are some helpful tips to guide you through a drunken day on the job.

1. Plan Ahead - A task like this is going to take some forethought. You don't just want to show up with a cache of booze on a whim and immediately take to pounding. That is a recipe for disaster. Ideally, you're going to want to pick a day when you have absolutely nothing to do except work. Check your calendar. Do you have a meeting tomorrow? Well, then tomorrow is not the day for you. The last thing you need is to be sitting in close quarters with a bunch of looky-loos hanging on your every slurred word. For maximum results, pick a day when a bunch of people are on vacation. Not only will this provide you with less of an audience, but nobody schedules meetings when people are out of the office en masse. Their ego will not permit them to have their Six Sigma presentation fall on the unattentive ears of a half empty meeting room. And for the love of god, when you get to work, stay at your desk as much as possible. This is no time for hallway chit chat. When you do have to leave your desk carry a piece of paper and walk fast. You'll look busy, nobody will bother you.

2. Drink Vodka - When you absolutely, positively must fool every motherfucker in the room, vodka is your go-to drink. This is no time to be a finicky drinker. Even if Thunderbird fortified wine is normally your hooch of choice, for today, you're just going to have to stoop to vodka. Sure, it still has a bit of a scent, but it's the most easily concealed alcohol scent there is. We'll get into how to conceal that scent later.

3. Flasks Are For Suckers - It should go without saying that bringing a flask to work is a horrible idea. It's just basic Murphy's Law. You know Murphy's Law, right? It's that law that says whatever bad can happen, like, um, will and stuff. And then your flask will fall out of your pocket in plain view of the entire office. And then you'll get crabs. We're pretty sure that's the law, verbatim. Anyway, since you're drinking vodka, just put it in a water bottle. No need to get flashy, 007.

4. Skip the Mints - Exuberantly minty breath is a dead give away that shenanigans are afoot. Nobody walks around popping Listerine strength breathmints all day long unless they have something to hide. Unless you have chronic halitosis, the newfound curiously strong scent coming from your piehole is going to get people talking. Once that happens, it's all over. Instead, to take the faint vodka scent off your breath opt for one of those crazy hybrid fruit gums that are all the rage these days. For all anyone knows, maybe Passion Fruit Acai Pomegranate Blueberry Blast really does smelly oddly like alcohol. For extra defense, eat something onion and garlic-y for lunch. You'll have the dragon breath (and probably explosive diarrhea) for the remainder of the day, but at least you can keep drinking under the radar.

5. Use Lots of Hand Sanitizer - Try as you might to dodge your co-workers all day, it's a given that at some point, someone will come bounding into your cubicle to ask if you got that memo or if you know what you're bringing to the potluck to celebrate Lola's shitty new grandkid or something. This is a problem. No matter how well you conceal the booze stink from your breath, it doesn't change the fact that you've spent the last six hours mixing vodka and Sprite at your desk. There will be an odd odor in the air. The kind of odd odor that would probably result in a fireball of Michael Bay proportions if someone were to light a match in your cubicle. But fear not, you can get around that. If someone invades your space, just casually reach for a bottle of hand sanitizer and freshen up your arthritic hands. This shit is made from alcohol. It smells more like booze than most booze does. They'll think nothing of it.

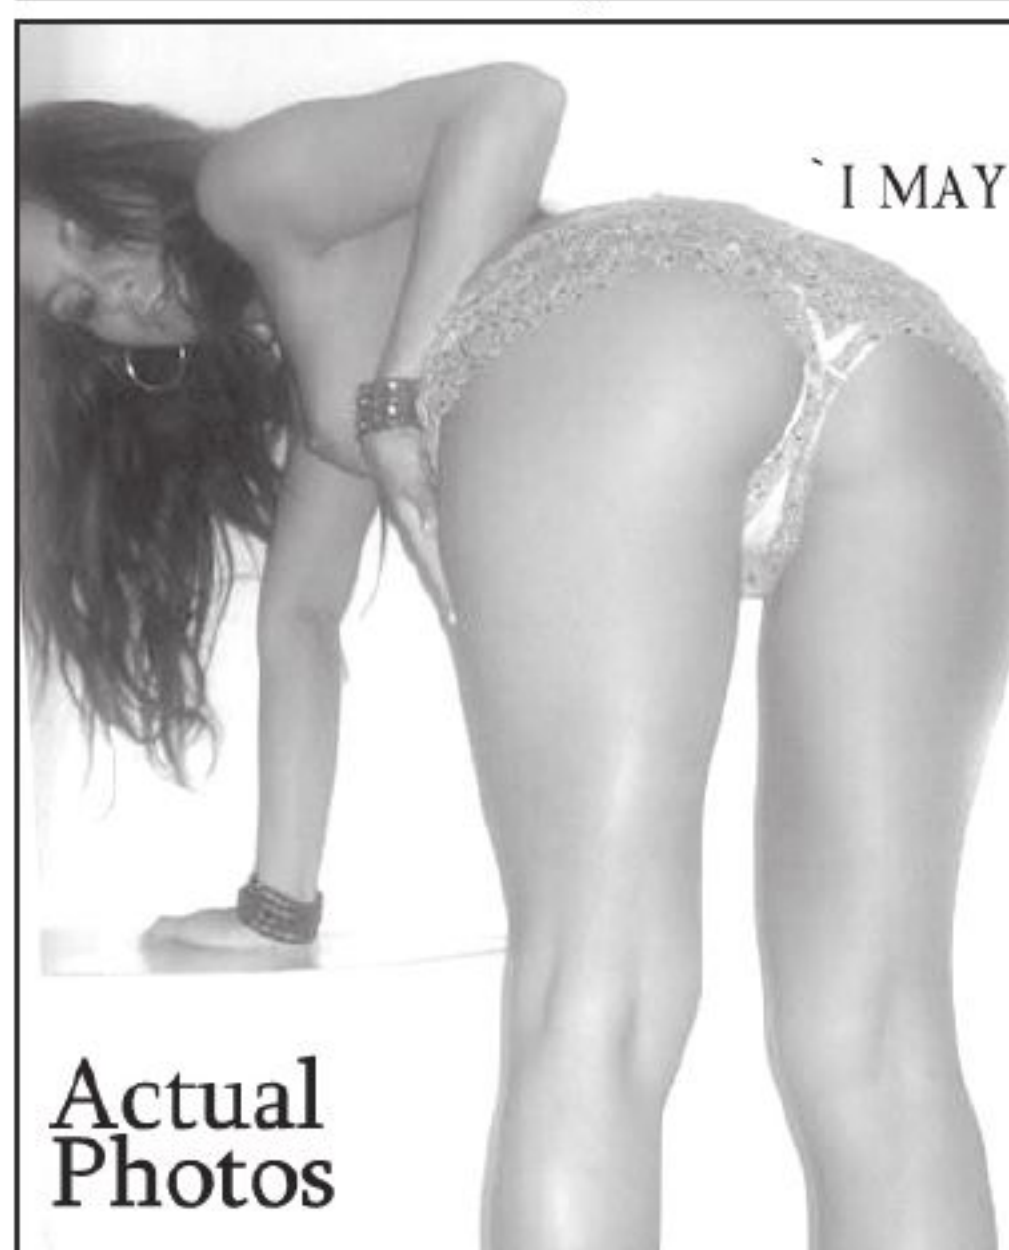

If the same person comes to your desk repeatedly and has the gall to ask why you keep sanitizing your hands every time they stop by, just keep your cool and say something innocuous like "maybe I think you have scabies, did you ever think of that?". At this point, it might not be a bad idea to also drop your pants and start fondling your package. Because let's be honest, if you're getting plastered at work, you're secretly hoping you will get fired anyway. After several hours of drunken data entry, you may just finally have the courage to make it happen.
